

Honour and Darkness

A tribute to and catalogue of the works of Alexander "Hugin" Wieser, founder of ambient black metal band Uruk Hai and many other side-projects, including Hrossharsgrani, Hrefnesholt, Elisabetha, B-Machina, Ceremony of Innocence and more! Here you will find my thoughts on his work and details on the releases as drawn from items in my personal collection, forming a fuller catalogue of his work than is currently available elsewhere online

Oh my God! Just when it looked safe to prepare another post, a second Smell The Stench mega-compilation swoops into view to maim and mangle poor defenceless Nazgul.

If the five-part compilation that was Part 1 wasn't epic enough, this second celebration of STS releases cracks the six-pack open with gusto, overloading your synapses with more obscenities and filth than a long weekend with Roy 'Chubby' Brown and Phil "Odium" Knight.

In the midst of the action come bands previously encountered on Honour and Darkness for their work with Bonemachine- we're talking the likes of Stirner, Novasak, Mystified, Atlas, Herz Tod, Gruuthaagy, JeFF, Kenji Siratori (booo!), and Rei Rea. The remainder of bands on this 113-band collection (!) will either be scarily familiar to you as a result of Smell The Stench Compilation 1, or as-yet unknown horrors poised to spring upon you like a resurrected corpse hungry for brains. Either way, if you are familiar with more than a dozen bands on this release then you really need to get out more and eat your greens.

Bonemachine appear at the start of Part Four, with an edited version of their 'Wald aus Stein und Rost' from the Miel Noir/Bonemachine split release "Weiss". Surrounding them is a sea of gore, grind, industrial, mad, bad and dangerous to know music that strips wallpaper at ten paces and would very likely liquify any CDr asked to contain their toxic potency.

If albums were beers (and there's a pleasant thought) this outing would be the equivalent of BrewDog Brewery's "Tactical Nuclear Penguin" or "The End of History", the latter of which until very recently was the world's strongest beer at 55% alcohol by volume and came in a bottle stuffed inside a small furry animal. God bless 'em, it's an interesting approach to selling a beer (even more so given the price of around £500 per bottle, and no Nazgul isn't making this up) even though drinking one would almost certainly leave you blind and dribbling like a lunatic.

And be warned - similar consequences will befall you if you ingest this compilation in one go.

If Smell The Stench made beer...
